

Ruth Todd Evans, M. D. had a long medical career including heading the Internal Medicine Division at Hough-Norwood Clinic in Cleveland, Ohio and teaching at Case Western Reserve School of Medicine. She is board certified in Internal Medicine and Geriatrics and was in private practice for 19 years.

Following her medical career, she has pursued other life-long interests in art and literature. She has studied oil painting with Sebastian Capella and Raye Anne Marks and has been in numerous group shows and several one-woman shows. She donates the proceeds of her art work to the Multiple Sclerosis Society.

Her book, The Panda Who Wouldn't Eat, was released in the fall of 2007 by Sunbelt Publications. Ruth has donated her royalties to the new, planned Children's Garden at Quail Botanical Gardens where she was a former board member.
